

Dear Candidate,

Instead of making memories with loved ones, dying people are being forced to live in financial uncertainty and waste precious time filling in forms and attending benefits assessments.

Like Rob, who was diagnosed with terminal leukaemia. At 21, he had to fight for the benefits he was entitled to, and still died having not received them.

Only people who are told they have six months or less to live can access the benefits they need quickly and easily. Yet many have terminal illnesses that are too unpredictable to make this call.

Every day, 10 people die while waiting for the benefits they need. We're calling for a change in the law so that anyone with a terminal illness can access the benefits they need, when they need them. And we need your help.

Thank you

My son Rob had to endure
a living nightmare.

Please help cut benefits
red tape for dying people
